What Michelle says:

"The ground floor was thoroughly thought out and designed before any excavation work started. This enabled me to maximise the space in all rooms and bring them to their full potential. A simple design idea of a curved wall positioned in the centre of the room provides a stunning impact and sets the mood for this shower room."

Project cost: £29,098

The brief:

An interesting design challenge which was too good to resist for Michelle - a central London property where the owners wanted to excavate the basement space beneath the house for a family entertainment room, shower/sauna, and wine cellar. Michelle curved the wall behind the sink to create a visual sculptured element as well as hiding the toilet from view. It gives the room the spa ambience the clients wanted and also provides a location for the art works they wanted to include wherever possible.
